

Mayor Casey Nunn and some keen young Craigieburn gardeners prepare for the Hume Food Summit. Picture: CARMELOBAZZANO

Summit to plant seeds of food policy

FOOD in Hume is a growing field of interest.

Healthy Together Hume, a council initiative, will host the Hume Food Summit next Tuesday, with residents invited to discuss the future of food in the municipality.

Council's director of city communities Margarita Caddick said the feedback and insights that come out of the summit will be used by council to develop a Food Policy.

"The Hume Food Summit brings together producers, distributors, retailers, community organisations, schools, service providers and Hume residents to help shape a better food future for Hume," Ms Caddick said.

The event will host a range of food experts, including Dr Nick Rose, a project co-ordinator at Deakin University's Food Alliance.

Hume Council will partner with Dianella Community Health and Sunbury Community Health Centre to host the Hume Food Summit on July 15, from 9am to 5pm.

RSVP: 9205 2572.