Basil comes to lunch

A sculpture made of recycled materials will be unveiled at a community tea party and lunch in Sunbury on Tuesday, November 11. The sculpture, named Basil, was created by staff and clients of Cohealth and Sunbury Community Health Centre. The party will include activities such as pot-planting and a poetry-reading in a new community garden. Project organisers will be on hand to hear ideas about how people would like the garden to be used. The garden and art project are part of efforts to highlight the benefits of outdoor activities for health and wellness. Cohealth provides community health and support services across Melbourne's western and northern suburbs. The community tea party and lunch is from noon at the rear of Sunbury Memorial Hall, 1 Stawell Street, Sunbury. For more details, phone Sunbury Community Health Centre on 9744 4455.
