See a new success

Sunbury Community Health's BoilOver inclusive performance ensemble will be the centre of attention during its Into-Me-See stage show.

BoilOver presents unique and innovative performances that take the stigma out of disability.

Creative producer and director Carmen Maddison said the show was an opportunity to see the artist's individual storyline through their alter egos and emotional worlds.

"The performance follows the nine lives of ensemble members," Maddison said.

"It focuses on the intimacy and what we keep inside and what we show."

Maddison said the show was made possible by a $10,000 grant from Brimbank council's Festival and Events Grants Funding program, because the show will be staged at The Bowery Theatre.

"It was really amazing to get council recognition," Maddison said.

The performance will be on Saturday, December 15 at The Bowery Theatre, 1 Princess Street, St Albans.

Tickets are $20 for adults, $15 for concession and $15 for groups of six and more.

Briefs

Audit committee

Macedon Ranges council is calling for expressions of interest from residents, property owners or business operators in the shire who are interested in becoming an independent member of its audit committee. The committee provides strategic input and advice on a range of controls relating to the delivery of the council's programs and services. If you are interested in applying, visit mrsc.vic.gov.au/jobs. Applications close Monday, December 17 at 5pm.

Road safety

Hume council is reminding residents and visitors to make safety their highest priority when enjoying festive lighting displays across Hume neighbourhoods in the lead-up to Christmas. Hume mayor Carly Moore asked residents who have Christmas displays that attract high volumes of visitors to get in touch with council's traffic management team to discuss any concerns regarding traffic and pedestrians.

Apology

An article in last week's Star Weekly, 'Deputy eager for the job ahead' incorrectly featured an image of Macedon Ranges chief executive Margot Stork – not deputy mayor Mandi Mees. Star Weekly apologises for the use of the wrong photo.
